Fourth Sunday in Ordinary

In today's second reading we find one of the most beautiful and familiar passages in the Bible; a recitation of fifteen characteristics of Christian love typically read at weddings and anniversary celebrations. Of course, this was not what Saint Paul had in mind when he was chastising the Christian community at Corinth for its lack of love. He admonished the members of the community to exercise better stewardship of Christian love. The practice of patience, humility, joy, truth, peace, affirmation, and hope are ways good stewards put love into action. Might there be one or two of these attributes we can work on in order to grow in our love for God and others?

We live our lives in a myriad of relationships; our spouses, our children, our families, our coworkers and friends, our church. We are called to be courageous in our fidelity to these wonderful people that God has sent our way. Fidelity is a decision on our part. It means we will stand by them just as God stands by us; in shadow and light, in joy and sorrow, in sickness and health.

Fidelity means we don't run away when trouble comes. We don't abandon one another when life tosses some miserable grenade in our path. We hold fast to one another, we commit our lives and energies to one another. We become Simon the Cyrene for one another, willing to assist with the crosses that others bear, not out of duty or burden, but out of love.

That whole notion of 'fair-weathered friends' is not who we are. We don't make friends with people just to have valuable contacts for our future or to build a stronger network of the influential and powerful. That's important for careers, not human life and relationships. We don't use people as stepping stones to get a loftier view from the mountain of power and success.

The more you have, the more you are occupied, the less you give. But the less you have the more free you are. Poverty for us is a freedom. It is not mortification or penance. It is joyful freedom. There is no television here, no this, no that. But we are perfectly happy.
