Confess your sin and be finished with it. God's mercy is greater than your sin. Don't be afraid, scrupulous, or anxious. You are a sinner full of sin when you go to confession, and when you come out you are a sinner without sin. But always, before everything else and everything else, you are a child of God.

Mother Teresa

In Jesus' parable of the Unjust Steward, we encounter a financial manager who has wasted his master's wealth and faces dismissal from his position. To overcome the crisis confronting him, the steward reduces some very considerable debts owed by poor neighbors to his master in order to help them out. Though the steward has sinned against God and his master by squandering what belongs to someone else, both the prudent way in which he goes about resolving the crisis coupled with relieving people who are in need can be seen as a way to better steward the gifts entrusted to us by God. Although good stewards today acknowledge that they may never use their God-given gifts in a way that completely conforms to the demands of the Gospel, a commitment to using their gifts with prudence and for the purpose of helping their neighbors wins God's favor.

Praying with the psalms gives us the opportunity to honestly approach the Father in thanksgiving, in petition, in anxiety, in despair, in gratitude and joy. Some days we want to pray a psalm of thanksgiving. Other days we might want to us a psalm that speaks of the hurt that we feel, and we cannot understand why this is happening to us. It is as if the psalms themselves give voice to the secrets of our hearts. Some days we feel safe and secure, and other days we feel abandoned and rejected. The entirety of the psalter assures us that no matter what we are experiencing we can still communicate with God and open our hearts to His grace. "Where can I go from your spirit? From your presence where can I flee? If I go up to the heavens, you are there; if I sink to the nether world, you are present there. If I take the wings of the dawn, if I settle the farthest limits of the sea, even there your hand shall guide me, and your right hand hold me fast. If I say, 'Surely the darkness shall hide me, and night shall be my light' – for you the darkness itself is not dark, and night shines as day. Darkness and light are the same."
