The Baptism of the Lord
 In today's reading from the Gospel of Luke we hear the proclamation of the baptism of Jesus with "all the people." Indeed, "heaven was opened," and the Father announced his special favor. Whenever we partake of the body and blood of Christ, heed his call in our daily lives, share his Good News, become instruments of his transforming justice and peace, heaven is opened to us, and through the Holy Spirit, the Lord announces his special favor on us as well. A good stewardship reflection this week might be this: How, or in what ways, have we personally experienced God's special favor in our lives?

Scrupulosity creates an anxiety within us to such a lethal degree that we see sin where there is no sin. Every dangerous thought, every possible distraction, every aspect of humanity with its limitations and weaknesses, becomes a sin. Not only does it become a sin, but it borders on the unforgivable. Once again, there is no room for God's mercy. Surely, He cannot forgive us when we have an angry thought or an impatient feeling, a disturbing desire or a resistance to prayer. Do not misunderstand this reflection. Sin is very real. It is around us and within us. But the need to be scrupulous is a painful, treacherous valley that is difficult to maneuver. It promises us perfection by naming everything as sinful, as mortally sinful, thus destroying our trust in a merciful Father. Because we are so convinced of our innate evil, we limit God's mercy and love. When we limit God, that is the very definition of idolatry. Of course, we confess our sins, but we must also allow that God forgives those sins. He does not seek our destruction but lifts us to Himself in love.
